Analysis of the Disappearance of Trevor Deely

I. Introduction

On December 8, 2000, 22-year-old Trevor Deely went missing after attending a Christmas party in Dublin, Ireland. His last known movements were captured on CCTV footage near his workplace, the Bank of Ireland Asset Management offices on Wilton Terrace. Despite extensive searches and appeals, his disappearance remains unsolved. This OSINT investigation aims to reconstruct his final movements using publicly available sources, geolocation techniques, and video forensics to identify potential gaps in the case timeline.

- Report Objective:

- To analyze Trevor Deely's last known movements through OSINT methodologies.
- To reconstruct the timeline using geolocation, satellite imagery, and CCTV analysis.
- To highlight any inconsistencies or investigative gaps using publicly available data.

II. OSINT Methodology

This investigation relies on the following OSINT techniques:

- 1. CCTV Footage Analysis:

- Reviewing available videos to examine possible persons of interest, environmental conditions, and movement patterns.
- Determining time and place of movement patterns.

- 2. Geolocation & Mapping Tools:

- Using Google Earth and historical imagery to verify locations.
- Using mapping tools to visualize and review movement patterns.

- 3. Public Record & News Reports:

- Reviewing official police statements, media archives, and missing person forums for information.
- Verifying information from officially documented and reliable sources.

- 4. Social Media & Forum Research:

- Analyzing discussions and theories related to the case to uncover any overlooked details.
- Formulating personal opinions relating to the disappearance.

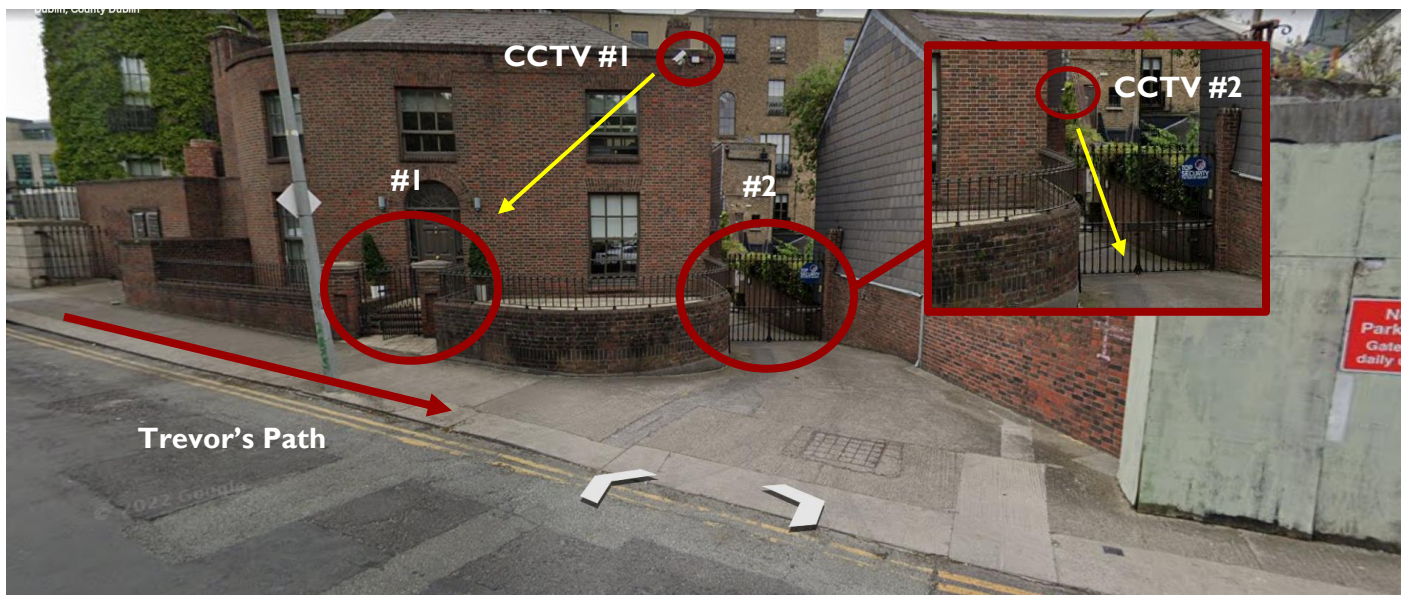

III. Analysis

Points of Interest

I. Timeline Reconstruction:

- Thursday evening, December 7, 2000: Trevor finishes work and heads to Cooper Face Jack's with his co-workers before their annual Christmas Party at the Hilton Hotel. After arriving at the Hilton and having a few more drinks, the party moves to Buck Whaley's nightclub.
- 3:25am: Trevor leaves Buck Whaley's and starts walking in the direction of his apartment.

- (Begins CCTV footage) 3:34:17am: A man in black appears to be on a phone call. He finishes his call and steps closer to the sidewalk. Deely passes by the man in black, however, they don't seem to talk to each other. The man remains in the same place for 17 more seconds.

- 3:34:34am: The man in black turns and walks towards the gate.
- 3:34:43am: The man appears at the gate. It is important to note that Deely has not arrived at the gate yet, which indicates he must have stopped before turning the corner.

- 3:35:01am: Deely arrives at the gate. He stood somewhere between the two CCTV cameras for about 44 seconds. Possibly to make a phone call to security to let him in the building.

- 3:35:07am: Deely attempts to open the gate, and it looks like the man in black has a short conversation with him.

- 3:35:31am: Deely is still at the gate. The other man appears to be under the influence of something, as his head tilts over to the right. The man continues to stand by Deely as he tries to open the gate. They don't appear to be talking to each other anymore.
- 3:35:52am: The gate opens and Deely heads inside. It takes the man three seconds to realize the gate has been opened. The man's delay again indicates that he was under the influence of something.
- 4:02:19am: 27 minutes later, Deely exits the gate. The man in black is no longer visible. Deely walks over to the wall and fixes his jacket. He then proceeds to open his umbrella and continue along Wilton Terrace.

- 4:03am: Trevor called his childhood friend Glen Cullen and left a voicemail since he didn't pick up. Glen later described the message as saying, "Hi, Glen, I've missed you there. Just on my way home, all going good, I'll talk to you tomorrow. Or words very close to that effect." It is worth noting that Glen deleted the message, and investigators never got a chance to hear it themselves.
- The following map traces Trevor's path to his last known location. He must have made the call to Glen at some point on this route.

- 4:14am: CCTV footage picks up Trevor walking past what was the AIB bank on the corner of Baggot Street Bridge and Haddington Road in the direction of his apartment.
- Around thirty seconds later, a man dressed in black passed by the bank walking in the same direction as Trevor. This is the last confirmed sighting of Trevor.

- Saturday and Sunday, December 9 and 10, 2000: Trevor's family call his phone, but they receive no answer.
- Monday, December 11: Trevor fails to show up to work and is reported missing.
- Tuesday, December 12: The investigation into Trevor's whereabouts begins.
- December 2016: A new investigation is launched into Trevor's disappearance.
- December 2023: Trevor's brother, Mark, revealed that gardai (Dublin police) with the help of a UK-based company, identified the second man in black and added that gardai were satisfied that this man had nothing to do with Deely's disappearance. However, nothing was stated about the first man by the gate.

2. Points of Concern & Questions:

- Due to a taxi strike, the bad weather, and the high number of Christmas parties, there would have been a lot more vehicle traffic and even foot traffic than usual. Question: Could the taxi strike have led more people to drive home under the influence? Could he have been hit by a drunk driver? Even then, why was there no body found?
- US President Bill Clinton was expected to arrive in Ireland four days after Deely went missing. If there was any physical evidence, such as his umbrella, it could've been swept up during the city wide clean-up. All large bins were cleared out for security purposes as well. Question: How much evidence, if any, was lost during this clean up?
- CCTV footage shown here was the only documented and publicly available footage. Trevor's route home seems incomplete since most CCTV systems wiped their data after 24 hours. Question: Is there any other way to determine his location after the footage (witnesses, advanced satellites, etc.)?
- When Trevor walked into his workplace, he talked with one of his colleagues who was there, checked a couple emails, had a cup of tea or coffee, took an umbrella and left. Question: Was Trevor drunk enough to fall into a body of water?
- The case has been unsolved for 25 years, with no new evidence. Question: Will the case forever go unsolved?

3. Documented Theories:

- Accidental Drowning (Likely):
 - Trevor was last seen walking toward the Grand Canal. Dublin's canals can be dangerous at night, especially under the influence of alcohol.
 - The gardai searched the canal in 2017, but found no remains.
 - If he accidentally fell in, why wasn't his body found in the early searches?
- Violent Assault or Robbery (Likely):
 - Trevor was walking alone, late at night, in bad weather—a prime target for robbery or assault.
 - The first man at the gate raises concerns, and there were reports of increased crime in Dublin's canal area at that time.
 - However, there are no clear signs of struggle or evidence of robbery.
 - No wallet, phone, or body was ever found. If it was a robbery that led to murder, why take Trevor himself?
- Suicide (Considered):
 - In late November 2000, just weeks before his disappearance, Trevor flew to Alaska to see a girl. His friend Glen worked as a flight attendant and was able to get tickets for cheap.
 - Glen states, "Trevor travelled from Dublin to Los Angeles and then as far as I am aware he got a connecting flight straight on up to Anchorage. This girl was at university in Anchorage. He went by himself, to see this girl that he had met in Dublin that summer. I never met her. She wasn't here for long."

- Theories state things didn't work out between the two and on a drunken night out, Trevor committed suicide.
- Unlikely since Trevor had a good job, no known personal issues, and no financial troubles. Also, his family never mentioned the possibility of suicide.
- Voluntary Disappearance (Unlikely, But Considered):
 - Some individuals theorize he left to start a new life, but as stated above, he had no known personal issues, no financial troubles, and no plans to leave.
 - No bank withdrawals, credit card use, or communication after December 8, 2000.
 - Highly unlikely given his family ties and no prior indicators of distress.
 - If he planned to disappear, why go back to work to retrieve an umbrella?

4. Other Theories:

- Another widely believed theory involves Trevor taking a different route home to stop at a 24-hour smoke shop. Trevor was a smoker, and smokers tend to smoke a lot more after they've consumed alcohol due to increased nicotine cravings. It is possible he was out of cigarettes and wanted to get more before he went back to his apartment.
- A map below shows the possible routes Trevor could have taken, and his last known location does indicate he could've been heading for the shop. If he wanted to get home faster, he should've kept going straight on Baggot Street.

- This map also indicates that he could've been meeting up with a third party to spend the night since his apartment was far away. If this is true, what went wrong with the person or persons?
- Reddit and other forum users have some of the following theories:
 - Abducted and murdered.
 - Knocked down by a drunk driver who went to the trouble of hiding his body.
 - Abducted to assist in robbing the bank (since he was an IT worker) but was killed trying to escape or refusing to cooperate.
 - One user states he was with a group of people and witnessed someone leaning over the canal to vomit. He remembers it because a girl in the group got sick soon after, and she blamed it on seeing the guy getting sick. They looked back at the guy, and he was gone. Possibly it was Deely, and maybe he fell into the canal.
 - Ended up in the river intentionally or by accident.
 - Got involved in a drug situation or prostitute situation on the way home.
 - Many still believe suicide.
 - Disappearance had to do with his work at the bank.
 - Jumped by the man in black, killed, and then his body was stashed in the mountains or placed in the sewers.
 - Killed by a well-known criminal that was active at the time of the murder.

5. Personal Theory

- The man in black is part of a gang. They are out on the streets because they know a lot of Christmas parties are ending and drunk partygoers are walking back to their homes due to the taxi strike. The weather is also bad, limiting visibility.
- Trevor leaves Buck Whaley's at 3:25am. The man in black receives a call from an associate that there is a man walking alone toward him. The man in black waits for Trevor to walk by.
- Trevor walks by him and stops before entering the view of the CCTV#2 camera. He probably calls security to let him in the building and leans against the wall during the call. The man in black hears Trevor talking on the phone and that is why he looks back at him.
- The man in black walks to the gate before Trevor because he is still on the phone call.
- The body language of both individuals indicates that they do not know each other. The man asks Trevor a question to which Trevor kind of ignores or doesn't really answer.
- Even though he is not seen on the CCTV footage when Trevor leaves, the man or one of his associates waits for him to leave. He is followed from that point on.
- Trevor decides he wants to go get cigarettes from the smoke shop or just has a personal preference to take the Haddington Road route home.

- Remember the second man in black on CCTV#3 is ruled out in December 2023 of having any relation to his disappearance, so he is not of any concern.
- Sometime after the CCTV#3 footage, he is either abducted or robbed, and a sequence of events leads him to be killed. The gang figures out how to hide the body without anyone noticing.
- Any evidence of Trevor's disappearance is lost in the city wide cleanup for the arrival of President Clinton. For instance, Trevor's umbrella on the side of the road would not have raised any suspicion at the time of the clean up since he was not reported missing yet. Also, if his phone and wallet were dumped in a trash bin, the evidence is long gone.
- The family offers a €100,000 reward for any information on his disappearance. The man in black never comes forward because he is part of the reason Trevor went missing.

VI. Conclusion & Recommendations for Further Investigation

This report provides an OSINT-based reconstruction of Trevor Deely's disappearance, analyzing publicly available CCTV footage, geolocation data, and media reports. While no new evidence is introduced, this structural timeline may help highlight areas for further inquiry. Future investigative steps could include:

- Further enhancement and forensic analysis of the available CCTV footage to identify the first man in black by the gate.
- Investigating whether additional street cameras existed in the area.
- Access advanced satellite imagery (if available) using Maxar or Planet Labs on the night of his disappearance. These resources are paid and typically used for government programs.
- Expanding OSINT research into potential social media discussions from people who may have interacted with Trevor that night.
